Head of School of Life Sciences

within the Faculty of Natural Sciences

Keele University is renowned for its exciting approach to higher education, innovative research, beautiful campus, strong community spirit and excellent student experience.

Head of School of Life Sciences

Salary: Professorial Grade plus HoS allowance

This post is a key appointment which will be of central importance in enhancing the School's research ambitions, developing undergraduate and postgraduate teaching and supervision and extending the School's profile regionally, nationally and internationally.

As the successful candidate you will have excellent organisational, communication and interpersonal skills and will be able to demonstrate experience of leadership and management in an academic environment coupled with the ability to motivate and inspire staff. You will be an outstanding research leader in your own right and will lead the School to further develop a visible and distinctive research identity which complements the established excellence of Keele's learning and teaching environment.

Informal enquiries to Professor Jonathan Wastling, Pro Vice-Chancellor and Executive Dean of Natural Sciences j.wastling@keele.ac.uk

For further details and application route please visit minervasearch.com/keele.

To apply, please send a cover letter and CV to keele@minervasearch.com by close of business on 1 March.

Keele University values diversity, and is committed to ensuring equality of opportunity, and to proper and fair representation across its senior decision making groups. In support of these commitments, the University particularly welcomes expressions of interest and applications from women and from individuals of black, asian and ethnic minority backgrounds for this post.

LEVERHULME TRUST

2019 Philip Leverhulme Prizes

Philip Leverhulme Prizes recognise the achievement of outstanding researchers whose work has already won international recognition and whose future is exceptionally promising. In 2019 there are thirty prizes available across six broad subject areas.

Prizes offer £100,00 over two or three years and may be used for any purpose that advances the prize winner's research, with the following exceptions: salary costs for the prize winner, capital costs, and institutional overheads.

In 2019, we invite applications from researchers working in the following subject areas: Archaeology, Chemistry, Economics, Engineering, Geography, Languages and Literatures. The subject areas are intentionally broad and we encourage applicants to consider which best reflects their area of research, irrespective of their departmental affiliation.

To be eligible, applicants must hold a post in a UK university or research institution and must have received their highest degree no earlier than 20 May 2009 (exceptions will be considered where applicants have had a distinct career break).

Applicants must be nominated by their head of department (or equivalent). Applicants may be nominated in one subject area only.

Closing date:
4pm on 20 May 2019

Guidance and nominations: full scheme details and the online nomination form are available on the Leverhulme Trust website: leverhulme.ac.uk/philip-leverhulme-prizes

The prizes commemorate the contribution to the work of the Trust made by Philip Leverhulme, the Third Viscount Leverhulme and grandson of William Hesketh Lever, the founder of the Trust.

THEunijobs

“Times Higher Education has helped to foster another important dimension of diversity at Harvard: international diversity. The exposure of Harvard's faculty positions on THEunijobs, since we embarked on our subscription package in October 2015, enhances our outreach efforts to a global community and showcases our institution as a destination of choice for academics around the world. Working with the THE team has also been a pleasure, and has enriched the conversation around international recruitment and retention.”

– Elizabeth Ancarana, assistant provost for faculty development and diversity,
Harvard University
