College of Social Sciences School of Social and Political Sciences

The University of Glasgow is one of the UK's leading research institutions and is ranked in the top 1% of higher education institutions worldwide. With an annual research income of more than £180 million, Glasgow is a member of the prestigious Russell Group, which comprises the UK's leading research universities. Our strategic plan Inspiring People Changing the World (2015-2020) sets out our ambition to be a world-class, world-changing university, building on our current strong academic and financial position, and further growing our excellent international reputation.

The School of Social and Political Sciences is one of four Schools within the College of Social Sciences. It is home to a vibrant community of dynamic and engaged research and teaching staff working across a broad range of social science disciplines. The School seeks to support all staff to produce world-class research and outstanding teaching and to take up opportunities for professional development.

We are seeking to appoint to the following positions within our School. All candidates will be expected to support the delivery of an excellent student experience by contributing to teaching, assessment and administration processes associated with undergraduate and postgraduate programmes and to undertake scholarship to enhance research-led learning and teaching in the School.

Lecturer in International Relations

Ref: 020446

The successful candidate will contribute to the development and delivery of a new undergraduate International Relations degree pathway. We welcome candidates with strong teaching and research records in the Political Sciences area of International Relations, but are particularly keen to receive applications from those with expertise of human rights, international political economy, international organisations or international political theory.

Lecturer in Media, Communications and International Journalism

Ref: 020851

The successful candidate will contribute to and build on the existing success of the MSc in Media, Communications and International Journalism, and support future growth within that programme. We welcome applicants with specialist knowledge of teaching methods and techniques relating to the sociology of media and communications and of historical and contemporary sociological research of the media.

Closing date for this post: 28 May 2018.

Lecturer in Security Studies

Ref: 020890

The successful candidate will contribute to and build on the success of the School's portfolio of programmes delivering on key areas of Security Studies within Central & Eastern European Studies. We welcome applicants from all areas within the broad field of Security Studies (cyber security, environmental security, human security, food security, energy security), and particularly those with an interest in Russia and the former Soviet Union.

Lecturer in Global Religions

Ref: 020447

The successful candidate will expand the global reach of the Sociology subject area's existing research, and facilitate the development of new, transnational collaborative projects. We are seeking candidates whose work focuses on religious movements, identities and traditions, particularly in the global South. We welcome applicants whose research explores the transnational expression and reproduction of religious movements, traditions and identities and/or which addresses religion as a central factor in forms of social inequality. Further, we would welcome applications from those who: i) have significant research experience in the global South; ii) have carried out ethnographic or long-term forms of participatory research and, iii) have the capacity to develop and sustain international research collaborations.

For informal discussions about any of the posts, please contact Professor Michele Burman, Head of School of Social & Political Sciences, by e-mail at Michele.Burman@glasgow.ac.uk.

For full details, and to apply, please visit <http://www.glasgow.ac.uk/jobs> and search for the related reference number.

Times Higher Education has helped to foster another important dimension of diversity at Harvard: international diversity. The exposure of Harvard's faculty positions on THEunijobs, since we embarked on our subscription package in October 2015, enhances our outreach efforts to a global community and showcases our institution as a destination of choice for academics around the world. Working with the THE team has also been a pleasure, and has enriched the conversation around international recruitment and retention.
